Teaching and Researching Translation (4th Edition) covers a wide range of essential topics, from the nature of translation to the tools they need to carry out their professional research in this burgeoning new field. This second edition has been updated to reflect the latest developments in translation studies. It is an indispensable resource for students and teachers alike. In particular, the book is an essential text for those studying translation at university level, and for all those involved in the teaching and learning of translation. As such, it is an invaluable reference work for the professional translator and researcher alike. The book is divided into three main sections: the first part covers the nature of translation, exploring a wide range of different contexts in which translation takes place; the second part explores the tools and techniques that translators and researchers use to carry out their work; and the third part discusses the future of translation studies, looking at the challenges and opportunities that lie ahead for the field. Throughout the book, a number of case studies are used to illustrate the points being made. These include a detailed analysis of a translation of a political speech, and an exploration of the role of translation in the spread of cultures. Additionally, there is a comprehensive bibliography of further reading and a glossary of key terms.

A Millennium of Turkish Literature
